

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. BIENNIAL REPORT OF THE FISH AND GAME DEPARTMENT

July 1, 1920, to June 30, 1922

A student of the general trend of everyday affairs and the many movements that are lining up with interest in the out-of-doors cannot but be impressed with the fact that the situation today, pertaining to the rural sections of our country, has taken on an importance and significance that mean that never again will the dwellers of our land stand indifferently by while individuals, under the impulse of an ulterior purpose, are permitted to work havoc among our hills and waters, the trees and plants that flourish on mountain and plain, and the living creatures that people these areas and live among the brush and in the stream.

The voices that have been striving for recognition have at last been heard, and the old feeling prevailing, that as far as natural resources were concerned, we had enough and to spare, has given place to the unsettling realization that unless we go in immediately for a drastic system of protection and conserving, we shall quickly find ourselves in circumstances dire and disturbing to a degree.

An impassionate and logical view of existing conditions clearly indicates the present generation to be getting busy in the matter of wild life protection, in the interest not only of the present, but also of the future. The people of today hold in trust a world for the people of tomorrow, not only to be safe and satisfactory to live in from the standpoint of an intelligent and progressive civilization, but a world that shall, as far as possible, maintain its natural and out-of-door beauty.

In both these respects men and women of today have a great responsibility resting on their shoulders.

For many years the United States has been witness to the fact, that in the development of the country from a commercial standpoint, little or no attention has been paid to the mischief that has been caused by interfering with natural conditions, without any thought of damaging results that might follow. The one aim has been to carry the commercial enterprise through, and let nature take care of herself, notwithstanding the additional handicaps thus placed in her way.

This procedure has not all been due to a selfish determination to carry out a project whatever the consequences to someone else. Ignorance of underlying conditions and the laws that govern them have, in the past, been largely responsible for many an unfortunate course that has been taken. On the one hand, where forest areas have been leveled without discrimination, and waters have been rapidly drained in order to accomplish certain results, there has been the thought in the mind that both wood and water were so plentiful there was no fear of exhausting them. On the other hand, there was never the ghost of a conception that in the areas of wood and water, mountain and plain around us, there was an attitude and relationship one to the other, in the highest degree scientific, and that called for the closest investigation and study, and particularly when any enterprise was projected of a character that would modify and interfere with the environment as man found it.

And again, this has been especially emphasized from the fact that the great army of wild creatures, mammals and birds, as well as the myriads of smaller creatures, have much to do with this. They are intimately associated with the world's welfare, which means that these living things are intimately associated with the welfare of the men and women living in the world.

Nothing can be more evident than that a subject such as this opens up an avenue that is both fascinating and vital in its appeal, and particularly does such an appeal come straight home to the thought and heart of the dwellers of such a state as our own. Iowa has comparatively little of what is known as rough land. Very largely, every acre can be brought under the plow, and be made to yield a crop of cereals or vegetables. And here a great danger lies, as moved by a desire to make every foot of ground yield something that will sell, the farmer cultivates too much, and cuts down too much and drains too much. This drastic interference with the course of nature deprives the wild birds of a home, and the wild birds are a necessity in policing the farmer's crops, especially in the spring of the year.

And thus the State Fish and Game Department, whether it wishes or not, must of necessity investigate along lines such as we have been considering. Compliance with the responsibility placed upon it means that, at all times, it must direct its attention to the life and environment of the whole out-of-doors, as this cannot be separated from the welfare of the living creatures, which are so closely identified with the out-of-doors.

In the future, in an intelligent endeavor to promote the largest possible increase in the number of game birds and species of fish that will be desired by the residents of Iowa, we feel that the closest and most friendly co-operation is necessary among all, not only those animated by the same ideas, but persons who, while deeply interested in the conservation of wild life, yet work from different motives.

There are those who, enthusiasts all the time for wild life protection, never wish to take a toll of that life, while others, such as sportsmen, equally enthused in the same direction, reserve to themselves the right, under the laws of the state, to engage in a day's shooting now and then.

In the past, these two classes have not co-operated as they might for the general good, not through any basic cause of unapproachable divergence, but through really not understanding each other. The man so much in love with the wild creatures that he cannot understand why any person could wish to shoot them, may find it difficult to gauge the attitude of him who is not built that way, but he is duty bound to respect the sportsman's right to what the law concedes to him, particularly when that sportsman, as is so often the case, does his best to protect and propagate that life during the seasons of the year when no shooting can be done.

For the welfare of all concerned, this co-operation on both sides of the fence is most desirable and necessary. No true sportsman wishes to see the number of the game creatures lessened; he would much rather witness their increase, but in view of the changing conditions unfavorable to such increase, which must come with growth of population, etc. (unless something unusually drastic can be accomplished to antagonize these conditions), a policy must be evolved, resulting from such co-operation, which will result in permanent benefit all round. No true sportsman will wish to advocate a course that means striking at the source of the supply of that he seeks to multiply. Rather will he be ready to counsel with those, who by long experience and investigation, are best fitted to plan and advocate the course for the state to pursue in the matter of remedial legislation and enlightened supervision.

In the support that this department can obtain through the sympathetic and hearty action of the farmers of the state, and which they are doubtless ready and willing to give, very much is expected and it will certainly be duly appreciated. The farmer is the custodian of Iowa's broad and fertile acres, and in such connection, is supervisor of the state's trees, streams and water areas. All this has a vital and intimate connection and association with the well-being of the living creatures that are found on the farms, and many of which are so necessary to the welfare of those farms. For instance, how far would the crops get that start with spring-tide, were not the busy, insectivorous birds at work, keeping down the myriad forms of life coming into activity with the warm days?

Not very far, we are all ready to concede, and thus it becomes of vital interest to the farmer that adequate provision be made for these splendid little bird policemen, who come up from the south, so ready to do their part in caring for the growing crops. These birds want more and better nesting sites, as too much brush and undergrowth has been cut away, leaving no proper place where the little mother can locate her home and rear her family. Brush and undergrowth are to the birdlings what the architect's last creation is to the human. Hence the wise farmer will, wherever he can, cultivate patches of trees, preserve swamp areas and foster underbrush; the last named might be done perhaps by planting something that would be of commercial value to the farm, while at the same time providing cover for the bird.

A great responsibility rests upon the agriculturist along the foregoing lines, and, judging from the magnificent strides the Iowa farmer has made in scientific and economic procedure in the recent years, it may be reasonably assumed that equally efficient service will be rendered, under conditions such as herein outlined and where the call is so clear and consistent.

The waters of Iowa, particularly when it is remembered that the eastern and western boundaries of the state are sections of the two most important rivers of the country, at once indicate important fishing interests. This division of the department's area of operation naturally demands special administration, a constant and detailed supervision, which cannot be unduly emphasized. And this is a reminder that it is a matter of lively satisfaction to the department that an interest in fish and fishing, from the standpoint of the amateur angler, seems to be springing up in various parts of the state. We believe this to be a healthy sign of an attitude towards a recreative pursuit, which cannot be but of economic and moral value to many a community, and any information or aid that the department can render will be cheerfully given.

SUGGESTIONS FOR IMPROVING THE FISH SUPPLY IN CLEAR LAKE, IOWA, WITH SPECIAL CONSIDERATION TO THE INCREASE OF GAME FISHES

(By H. L. Canfield, Fish Culturalist, U. S. Biological Station, Fairport, Iowa)

An examination of Clear Lake, Iowa, was made by the writer September 23, 24 and 25, 1921, relative to conditions affecting the fish supply of the lake, with a view to determining possible ways of bringing about an increased game fish production.

General characteristics of the lake

Clear Lake is about 5 miles long and 2 miles wide at its greatest width. Its greatest depth is about 25 feet, the shores sloping very gradually to the deeper water. The general source of water supply is in all probability bottom springs, rainfall contributing directly and indirectly to the supply. The Iowa Lake Bed Survey report of 1917 gives the area of Clear Lake as about 3,643 acres, with a drainage area of about 8,400 acres of farm land. The shores of the eastern part of the lake are occupied by the town of Clear Lake, Iowa, and numerous summer cottages which extend around the end of the lake from the western outskirts of the town of Clear Lake to Dodge's Point on the opposite shore. This part of the lake is widest and deepest. The shores of the western part of the lake are for the most part unoccupied, and the lake becomes shallow, the shores nearly meeting at a point about 5,000 feet from the bridge and roadway at the extreme western end of the lake, forming a shallow little bay which is not navigable to any but the smaller boats. The bottom of this little bay is covered with a large variety of submerged aquatic plants. Beyond the bridge and roadway a shallow slough of some proportions extends, which contains a still greater variety of aquatic plants, including cat-tails, rushes, sedges, pond lilies, wild rice, etc. The bay with the adjoining slough provides spawning and feeding grounds for many of the fishes and comprises the most favorable "nursery" for young fishes to be found about the lake. It is regrettable that like conditions are not more abundant, as the lake is too free of shallow, marshy sections. The lake bottom throughout is quite well stocked with a variety of submerged aquatic plants and skirting the entire lake, except in very restricted sandy areas, a growth of bulrushes prevails off shore and just beyond the line of greatest wave action. These bulrushes grow from three to five feet above the water surface at a depth from three to ten feet, and while troublesome to boats and launches, they do not hinder their passage. These bulrushes provide useful protection to fishes in escaping their natural enemies.

The lake bottom

The shores of the lake are firm, clean and very gradual, practically all being sandy with some gravel for a distance of about 25 to 100 feet into the lake. These conditions are due no doubt to the wash of the waves. Beyond these shores, which constitute the inner growth line of bulrushes, mud bottom prevails except for occasional patches of blue clay and the several sandy bars. The mud is composed of a slick, silty gray soil, samples of which are odorless and at the time of examination were quite free of the small animal organisms which inhabit favorable lake bottoms. This silty mud lodges on the aquatic plants in the lake and was noticed repeatedly on the mushroom anchors of the boats in use on the lake. A pole thrust into the bottom often went some distance through this mud before sand or clay was touched. Patches of the blue clay were in evidence now and then and occasionally a fine, sandy, loose soil with fibrous plant growth was located, but the greater portion of the bottom is composed of the silty mud described, which cannot be said to be generally favorable to the propagation of small aquatic organisms, the silt interfering with their locomotion, breathing and general welfare.

Aquatic plants

Conditions here favor the growth of aquatic plants and the lake is provided with an abundance of submerged varieties. It is said that previous to the "coming of the carp" they were so numerous as to be objectionable, having about taken possession of the lake, but since carp were introduced some years ago this vegetation has been reduced materially and held well within bounds. Present-day conditions seem to bear up this assertion. The growth of aquatic plants is, of course, a source of great food supply for game and other fishes indirectly and to some extent directly. Indirectly as a producer of microscopic and other small food and directly as contributing food for fishes on which game fishes feed. The following aquatic plants were gathered from Clear Lake and represent only a small part of the flora of the lake. For their identification I am indebted to Prof. H. Walton Clark, of the U. S. Biological Station, Fairport, Iowa: Scirpus validus, Potamogeton pectinatus, Potamogeton, Chara, Cladophora, Myriophyllum venticillatum, and Najas flexilis.

The available food supply for game fishes

Examinations of bottom soil and aquatic plants do not show quantities of organisms available as fish food except in restricted areas, and while this condition is to be expected to a greater or less degree at this time of the year, the fishes of the lake having harvested a great part of the population, still a greater amount of animal organisms should be in evidence if the lake is amply stocked with them. Doubtless there are myriads of these small organisms to be found in the lake, but that the lake is shorter in its supply due to the silty condition of the mud bottom seems to be a fact in evidence. This, of course, limits the food of fishes accordingly, but it is a condition not easily overcome. The abundant growth of aquatics, however, helps materially to cover the loss caused by the unfavorable bottom.

Dealers in live bait find it necessary to collect practically all minnows to supply the demands of summer pole and line fishermen from nearby creeks, although it is reported that two varieties of minnows are quite plentiful in the lake previous to and after the close of the summer season. Large schools of shiner and other minnows are said to come into the clean, sandy shores (wave washed area) to spawn in the spring, and revisit these waters to a lesser degree in the fall to obtain food in the shoal warm areas. What is known locally as the "sun minnow" or "greaser" is sometimes caught in limited numbers during the summer months, but the supply of minnows cannot be especially abundant or they would be available to some extent in summer.

That carp are quite abundant in this lake is general information, and the writer had easy opportunity to substantiate this fact. The exact date of their introduction into these waters is not a hand, but it is likely that the buffalofish preceded the carp, the buffalofish being an inhabitant at this time and an American native fish. That the carp outnumber the buffalofish 500 to 1 is probably not underestimating the buffalofish population of the lake. This condition seems to bear up the statement that there are not the numbers of animal organisms in the lake bottom that are found in the cleaner-bottomed lakes, for buffalofish compete successfully with carp where bottom conditions are favorable to the growth of small animal organisms. Like the carp the buffalo fish consume quantities of aquatic plants, but of the two fishes carp are the greater vegetarians. Knowing the lake with its muddy bottom and abundance of aquatic plants it will be easily understood that the lake is favorable to carp production. That carp are very beneficial to the game fishes of this lake in furnishing them a supply of young carp as food cannot be successfully contradicted. Without them the game fishes would reduce their own numbers materially through cannibalism as a result of shortage in "minnow" food.

Carp as forage fishes

Local estimates are that one ton of game fish a day is removed from the lake during the summer season by pole and line fishermen. That estimate is perhaps large, but it is certain that large quantities of game fish are removed daily throughout the entire summer, and these fishes, with the exception of the pike perch, pickerel and yellow perch, are fishes which produce very small broods and all are preyed upon during their incubation and before attaining fingerling size by aquatic enemies other than fishes too numerous to mention, as well as by fishes of all kinds, including their own species and even by the parent fishes. All of the game fishes are predacious and will have live bait and plenty of it, and the quantities of young fish required to satisfy their requirements is simply enormous. This means that there must be forage fishes available or the game fishes for the most part will reduce their species through cannibalism. The true minnows, the young of carp, buffalofish and other like fishes provide this food in greatest quantities and are therefore indispensable to the game fishes. The minnows have very small broods, often not more than 25 to 50 eggs being deposited by one female, while a female carp weighing 5 pounds will average about 500,000 eggs. It will be easily understood that carp are the big game fish live bait food producers in this lake.

Carp, when allowed to increase without restraint, grow large, become obnoxious, and finally defeat the purpose for which they are so valuable. In a lake so favorable to the carp as Clear Lake an increase in the numbers of large carp is to be expected and they should be kept "fished down" or eventually they will injure the game fish production through competition in the pursuit of food. Not directly, but indirectly, by destroying the plants on which small aquatic organisms subsist and bringing about by bottom feeding conditions unfavorable to small food organisms and fish life.

That carp and other like fishes, and not just the game fishes, should be removed from waters in the interest of maintaining a proper balance, is obvious, but to exterminate these valuable forage fishes would be foolish indeed, even if it were practicable to do so. Fortunately the commercial fishes can be kept within bounds in most instances at no expense; in fact, often at a profit, by commercial fishing, and this should be done whenever needed. Clear Lake with its present supply needs commercial fishing for carp, bullheads and catfish.

Bullheads and catfishes

These fishes are bottom feeders and, while contributing very little as food to game fishes, devour eggs of pike and other fishes that deposit their eggs on the bottom; therefore, they should be "fished down" for the benefit of the game fishes. In Clear Lake great quantities of bullheads are to be found, and as this fish is not fished for by pole and line fishermen to any extent, its numbers are becoming a menace to the game fishes.

Commercial fishing

The writer accompanied Mr. Z. Magoon, local commercial fisherman operating in partnership with Mr. Frank Vernon, and had opportunity to examine the equipment, inspect the fish and see the method being pursued in their capture. These fishermen operate five fyke nets with long leads in each "outfit" and are said to fish two such outfits, although fishing only one while the writer was at Clear Lake. The outfit observed was about 3,500 feet long and 10 feet deep, with wall leads of 2½-inch mesh into which were woven 5 six-hoop nets of usual tunnel construction, spaced at about equal distances apart. The outer hoops were about 5 feet in diameter, the outfit being simply a series of fyke nets with long leads.

The method of fishing is to stake one end of the net, then lay it out from shore around the outer edge of the bulrushes and back to shore at a distant point, thereby completely encircling, by means of the net and shore, an area in which carp has been previously observed working. After one to three days the carp finding themselves entrapped attempt to pass the net barrier and enter the hoop funnels of the fyke net, from which they are removed twice daily by the fishermen, who take them to their fish market at Clear Lake to ship or retail, or to their fish retaining pens near Ventura to be held until needed.

The pen in use consists of two sections, each about 25x25 feet, constructed of board fencing driven into the lake bottom, in water 3 to 4 feet deep. Near the pens on the shore a little shack has been built as quarters for the fishermen and storage for their equipment.

The method of capture in practice by commercial fishermen on Clear Lake, nets being attended regularly, injures as few fishes as could reasonably be asked, the loss being practically nothing, but to operate seines of large mesh under supervision after the close of the summer season and before the weather is severe enough to chill the game fishes that would be caught and returned, would perhaps be more agreeable to the summer visitors, as the space now taken on the lake by set nets during the summer would be avoided. This method should not be objectionable even in midsummer and if handled properly might be an attractive feature. The plan would be as satisfactory for removing the rough fish as the method in practice now and possibly it would be a better business proposition to the state and to the commercial fishermen as well. The present method of fishing, however, is not harmful to the game fishes.

Fishes captured

The following varieties of fish were seen in the nets of the commercial fishermen, all of which were returned to the waters except carp and buffalofish; carp, bullheads, striped bass (local name silver bass), crappie, bluegill, pike perch (wall eye), yellow perch, channel catfish, buffalofish (I. cyprinella). The great quantity of fishes captured by commercial fishermen are carp and bullheads, while the pole and line fishermen catch mainly silver bass and yellow perch.

Quantities of the various species of fishes to be found in the lake are here listed in the order of their approximate numbers: Carp, silver bass, yellow perch, bullheads, sunfish, crappie, black bass, pickerel, pike, sauger, buffalofish and catfish.

The pickerel are highly esteemed here by pole and line fishermen, it is said, and with the pike are favorites, although striped bass and yellow perch are considered choice fish and are much more generally taken. Yellow perch, bluegills and crappie are plentiful in the lake, and large mouth black bass are said to be increasing. The writer had occasion to see many young bass in the western shoal waters of the lake, and as conditions in Clear Lake are quite favorable to black bass, a gradual increase should occur. The lake is said to be free of gar and has but very few dogfish.

Mussels

While having no particular bearing to the game fish supply of the lake, it will perhaps be well to record that the only commercial mussel observed was the L. luteola, grass mucket, about 50 examples of which were raked from where they were lodged in the side of a sand bar on the north bank of the "neck" at the western end of the lake. These were quite thin and therefore of inferior commercial value. The distribution of commercial and other mussels within the lake is quite limited and commercial clamming has never been done on this lake.

Suggestions for improving the game fish production of Clear Lake

The larger carp should be removed by commercial fishing in the manner now being pursued, or by seining, or both, restricting the capture of carp to individuals weighing over 5 pounds.

The capture of bullheads and catfish should be pursued in like manner, restricting their capture to individuals weighing over 1½ pounds or without restriction as to size.

In addition to controlling the lake and its fishes to maintain the desired balance, artificial propagation will be of benefit to increase more quickly any species of fish which the conditions of the lake favor.

The bulrushes should be retained about the lake where practicable.

The refuge provided by the western bay and adjoining slough is very valuable to the welfare of fishes and wild life and this area should be retained in a natural state, and if practicable similar areas should be encouraged in other shallow parts of the lake.

It is understood that the slough beyond the bridge is private property; this should be the property of the state and retained as a part of the lake for the benefit of the fishes in the lake and for the good of wild life in general.

ROUGH FISH REPORT

Report showing number of pounds of fish taken and amount received by the state in the removal of rough fish from the various lakes in which they had increased to such an extent as to be detrimental to the propagation of game fish. As provided by Section 2546 of the Supplement to the Code, 1913, permits were granted for the seining of rough fish, the state receiving a percentage from the sale thereof.

MUSSELS

Because of the rapid decrease of mussels in the streams of Iowa, the Thirty-eighth General Assembly passed an act placing the regulation of mussel capture under this department by providing for a license for those taking mussels, prescribing the manner in which mussels should be taken, and for the opening and closing of certain streams to the taking of mussels.

Under this authority the following sections of streams in Iowa were closed to the taking of mussels for a period of five years, extending from January 1, 1921, to January 1, 1926:

DES MOINES RIVER—Closed from mouth to Eddyville and from Des Moines to Ft. Dodge.

IOWA RIVER—Closed from mouth to Marengo and from Marshalltown to Iowa Falls.

CEDAR RIVER—Closed from Cedar Rapids to its source.

SHELL ROCK RIVER—Entire river closed.

SMITH CREEK—Entire Smith Creek in Muscatine county closed.

The issuance of mussel licenses did not commence until in August, 1919. From August to December 31, 1919, there were 173 mussel licenses issued. During the year ending December 31, 1920, the first year the mussel law was in complete operation, 562 resident licenses, 10 non-resident and 3 dredge licenses were issued. For the year ending December 31, 1921, the license issuance decreased, and only 300 resident licenses, 1 non-resident and 1 dredge license were issued. This decrease was due to the order which closed large areas of the Des Moines, Iowa, Cedar and Shell Rock Rivers to the taking of mussels for a five-year period commencing January 1, 1921.

The enormous decrease in production during the year ending December 31, 1921, the first year the closed areas were in effect, serves to emphasize the value of these closed areas. For example, over 446,000 pounds of mussel shells were taken from the Shell Rock River during 1920, while none were removed in 1921. The several thousand pounds, which it is certain would have been removed during 1921 had not the Shell Rock River been closed to clamming, now have an opportunity to propagate, and at the expiration of the five-year period, when the river will be opened to clamming, it will be restocked through self-propagation to such an extent that shells may be taken without danger of extinction.

The total production and value of shells taken, as shown by the production table, is not complete, but merely gives an idea as to the amount taken and the value thereof. This table was compiled from reports required of each license holder at the end of each year. It is, however, impossible to secure reports from each licensee, due to the wandering nature of commercial clammers in general. During 1920 the license issuance amounted to 575 licenses, while in 1921 it amounted to 302, but for 1920 only 458 reports were received and in 1921 only 230 reports were received. The totals of the production table are made up from the reports actually received since no estimate was made of the production of clammers not reporting.

The U. S. Bureau of Fisheries maintains a Fisheries Biological Station at Fairport, Iowa, which has accomplished wonderful results in propagation of mussels, the survey of mussel resources, the investigation of mussel problems and the promotion of mussel protection. During 1920 approximately 183 million glochidia were released from this station.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

Honorable N. E. Kendall, Governor of Iowa.

Sir: In accordance with the provisions of the law, I herewith submit the twenty-sixth report of the Fish and Game Department, covering the biennial period ending June 30, 1924.

Respectfully submitted,

W. E. ALBERT,
State Fish and Game Warden.

REPORT OF FISH AND GAME DEPARTMENT

JULY 1, 1922 TO JUNE 30, 1924

The department of fish and game, whether in this state or any other, at this period of our country's history presents a field wide and fascinating to a degree. The management of such a department is naturally and logically brought in contact with sets of conditions almost endless in their variety and ramification. These come with a challenge which the intelligent and forward-looking mind can neither side-track nor avoid.

Fish and game includes the habitat and environment of finny, feathery and furry creatures. In the fish leaping into the sunlight and the bird breaking cover, we see the clear, purling stream, the placid lake, the marsh wondrously adapted to its specific forms of life, the underbrush in whose friendly shade the warbler and the timid mammal hide, the wooded height guarded by growths of a century or more, where the soil is secure and the refreshing rains from the skies are wisely retarded in their further flow.

And while we see all these, we hear the magical concert and symphony of out-door voices, ever attuned to the welfare and delight of man, a harmony and unity prevailing that man only can disturb. But man has disturbed it sadly, and thus a process is demanded which shall meet the dire situation, and, as far as possible, restore what prevailed when our country was far less densely populated than now.

To the claims of conservation of the out-doors the State Fish and Game Department will respond, and to the best of its ability meet the requirements of its natural and logical field, while appealing to every dweller of our beautiful and nationally known progressive state to co-operate with it first, last, and all the time.

Alarm voices have long been sounding in our land as to the devastation of its wild life of every kind, but of late these voices have become more clarion-like in their note, more insistent in their demand. Commercial greed and personal selfishness are having a mighty clash with the forces of law and order, the words here being used in their best and most truly normal sense. The marvelously lovely framework and setting of our outdoor America has been indelibly scarred and the ruthless agency is industriously functioning. And as every state through its fish and game department, or similar organization, should respond to its duty and inherent destiny here, so we of Iowa will shoulder our burden and respond "Aye" to the call.

As is so well known, Iowa has a super broad area of land, easily accessible to cultivation, practically the whole of its fertile surface coming under the domination of the plow and seed-drill, and yielding a rich return in the crops that follow in their train. But a state that has nothing but fertile soil is poorly off indeed. Water is required, swamp is required, rock is required, hill and dell required, in addition to these. Not only are what we have enumerated required to minister to man's happiness in the higher realm of being, paramount in importance, but they are necessary and absolutely so, when it comes to man's needs as an animal in the matter of being fed and clothed.

And our efforts should function to the protection of Iowa's lakes, streams, marshes and woodlands, preserving these, as far as possible, as we have received them from the Creator's hands, and we thus enjoy the full benefit they were intended to convey. It is perfectly legitimate to drain certain wet lands in the interest of agriculture, as on a rare occasion it may be demonstrated that it is wise to straighten a stream, but the last named should never be done, apart from careful investigation and study, always bearing in mind the over preponderance of land that Iowa possesses of cultivable kind.

This report outlines certain data of the two years ending June 30, 1924, these generally dealing with the issuing of licenses of varying kind, records of law-breaking, and financial tables. As will be noted relative to the last named, not a cent is drawn from the tax-payer's pocket, as the department runs under its own power all the time.

The general character of this report is true to the trend of the past, but with new conditions and a broadening vision, as already indicated, we shall, as we proceed in detail, give effect to suggestions and recommendations to which we invite the respectful attention of our readers, and then co-operation as opportunity offers.

Among many subjects having special significance are the following:

THE AGRICULTURISTS OF IOWA

We are glad to recognize and reciprocate the valued aid the farmers of our state contribute to the great enterprise for which the department stands. This assistance, we feel, will be multiplied and accelerated when our agricultural friends realize how much more can be done by complying more sympathetically with nature's own ways and restoring as far as possible what we have suffered the past to take from us.

The call is imperative that we increase very largely the number of our insectivorous and other birds. Can anything surpass in beauty and wonder of appeal what a spring day in Iowa reveals, when fresh from the southland appear regiments of tiny aviators, arrayed in their own distinctive uniform, that declare themselves the farmer's active and efficient aids? They get to work without delay, they labor diligently, they do not loaf, their little families fatten on the carcasses of the farmer's enemies, and though these enemies are, in many cases, very small, their infinite numbers represent a menace that strong language only can adequately express.

With such an effective illustration as this, we have a clear demonstration that the need is more than urgent for a far, far greater number of these wonderfully helpful feathered police. And the farmer, as the supervisor and custodian of the broad, fertile acres of Iowa, is the one to promote this necessary and imperative movement. An essential step in bringing this about is the cultivation of cover and underbrush.

To advocate an increase of cover may seem to be stepping backward, but while it is logically this, in all that is really progressive it indicates a going forward. If we would retain and increase the invaluable labors of our little insect and weed seed warriors, we must provide for their lodging. We must forever relinquish the idea of what is known as "cleaning up" everywhere. A prim appearance, where all rough places are made smooth, bunches of thorn and bramble eliminated, all underbrush shaved away and the moisture of the swamp removed, may respond to a certain idea of neatness, but is bad scientific farming and will bar the way to giving us increased efficiency in nature's own plan for the protection of our crops, the splendid militant labors of the birds of the air.

If the plea be made, that to allow a certain area of farm land to revert to wild growth, would be to reduce the acreage of cultivated fruits, the answer is forthcoming that the amount of this would be negligible, and much more than made up in the benefit accruing from the carrying out of the principles of farming according to nature's plan, which in the last analysis must inevitably stand as the best. Would it not be a change for the better to have more bird helpers and less expenditures for Paris green and similar preparations, with the unpleasantness associated with their use? And the increase of cover so necessary for bird life could no doubt be brought about by the cultivation of certain growth which would secure this in addition to being of economic value.

OUR LOYAL SPORTSMEN

The department much appreciates the helpful and growing interest manifested by the sportsmen of Iowa, indicating an increasing all around co-operation among the men and women, who would like to see the out-door cover of our state much more populous with game birds, and its streams and lakes more numerously tenanted with game fish.

The constantly increasing numbers of fish and game clubs in our state is an index to a healthy prevailing sentiment for fish and game conservation, and the department seeks close and sympathetic co-ordination with these clubs and all similar movements, that by common organized effort the best results may be attained for the cause in which we are severally interested.

WOBBLING JUSTICES OF THE PEACE

A situation calling for concerted endeavor is that of a locality where law enforcement is difficult, and where, after our deputies have labored hard and intelligently to secure convictions, these efforts have been rendered abortive through a lack of healthy, public spirit, and the loose and wobbling attitude of some of the justices of the peace presiding at the trials. We feel that where such a situation exists, (and we are afraid that it is all too common) most valuable aid can be rendered by the law-abiding citizens of such a community, and the local fish and game clubs would appear to be the strategic avenue through which this aid will come in its most effective and forceful way. Such co-operation will also assist in interpreting the status of our deputy game wardens. These men represent a state department second to none in intrinsic importance and no effort will be spared on our part to supply our various centers and districts with men whom the local community will respect and support.

THE POLLUTION OF OUR LAKES AND STREAMS

The department wishes to place itself on record as favoring the most drastic action for antagonizing the pollution of our lakes and streams. Simply because it is convenient to turn the refuse of our cities and industrial plants into our public waters is no valid reason why it should be done, and no reason why these waters should not be as pure as the air we breathe. There are streams in the east of our country that are open sewers of filth. Do we wish a similar situation in a state that, as yet, is largely not in such a category? If not, then we should lose no time whatever in fighting to the limit any further advance of the stream pollution menace of the east. That it is with us, all those who witnessed a number of dead and dying fish on February 1st last, in the Shell Rock river near Greene, can abundantly testify. This was one of the revelations arising from the public enquiry instituted as to the conditions of the river, in response to the appeal of the Greene residents.

The excuse put forward for permitting stream pollution will be that it is in the interest of "Big Business," but that is by no means justifiable. Big business is not the biggest thing after all and moreover in the very nature of things should be big enough to care for its own waste, and if it cannot do this, there must be a screw loose somewhere. The really big thing is to keep the wonderful out-of-doors, with every legitimate provision and change for human need, as the Creator designed it, and thus shall we secure all that is best in human happiness and welfare.

A stream should never be straightened, unless the reasons advanced for such bear the marks of extreme and imperative need. A winding stream as nature made it provides nooks and crannies and corners where the fish can live their own home life, deposit their spawn and protect their progeny. And then the winding course retards the river's flow, as nature would have it and have it for the best. A straightened stream is merely an open drain, for the beauty of the original has gone, and beauty is also an economic asset. The course of no stream should be altered, unless passed on by a body of men competent to deal with the situation from the standpoint of education and experience.

THE RING-NECK PHEASANT

Through the activities of the state game farm and the subsequent initial distribution of the bird throughout Iowa, its numbers have greatly increased, particularly in some sections, indicating that it finds our territory suited to its needs and that it is becoming well acclimatized.

In some counties where this pheasant has become fairly numerous, complaints have been made of its preying on the farmer's crops and to some extent this may be true, though doubtless such stories have often been exaggerated.

During the term of the 1923-24 legislature, the department favored a small bag limit of the male ring-necks in sections where the birds were most numerous, but the law-makers of the state did not think that the time had arrived for this. As the bird further multiplies, proper steps will be taken to regulate this in the interest of all concerned and the subject receive the consideration warranted by its importance. The ring-neck is a fine large and handsome bird, on the one hand adding to the picturesque character of our fields and cover, and on the other representing a food factor of considerable value.

THE DEPUTY WARDEN

The ever enlarging area of activity and service for which the department stands, naturally means that the deputy wardens located through the state inherit a responsibility increasing in similar ratio. The added importance to the duties of these many helpers, tends to draw the best from them in the discharge of such duties, and we invite the co-operation of Iowa residents everywhere in lining up with our men, particularly where a situation may develop a delicate and difficult angle. No post in the state is more honorable than that connected with our work, and we trust our citizens generally will recognize this. We hope that before long every county in Iowa will have its deputy game warden, to whom every wild life lover can look for support in the mutual cause, and who in return will heartily reciprocate such action. This will pave the way for greater and better things still.

THE FISH OF LAKE OKOBOJI

Among the outdoor gems of Iowa, and in fact of the central west, is the West Okoboji Lake, with its deep blue waters and wooded environment. The July-September, 1923, number of the magazine, Iowa Conservation, contains an attractive outline of work done by Dr. L. H. Tiffany of the University of Ohio, during the summer of 1923, in the study of the algae of this lake, aquatic plants on which fish live extensively. The article is from the pen of Dr. Robert B. Wylie of the State University of Iowa, Director of the Lakeside Laboratory, Okoboji, where year by year research work is carried out in the interest of biology.

After a general survey of what has been going forward for a number of years in connection with a study of this lake, and specifically of its plant life, Dr. Wylie reports on the co-operation received from the State Fish and Game Department in securing Dr. Tiffany for this work, at the same time paying an interesting tribute to the latter in what he had accomplished in revealing conditions having an important bearing on the welfare of the various species of fish that live in the lake.

The department is more than glad to assist in progressive scientific and economic advance such as this, and will welcome all such opportunities, commensurate with its natural limitations, from whatever part of the state they may come.

WILD RICE

The introduction of wild rice throughout the state has been a helpful factor in promoting the increase of duck visitors. The plant is not native to Iowa, but readily grows here. Wild ducks are fond of it, and the number of stopping places for ducks can be increased by planting it in suitable locations. The department will be glad to furnish seed rice to persons in the state applying for it, and who will see that it is properly planted and cared for.

During the first year of this biennium the department purchased and distributed throughout the state 1,120 pounds of wild rice seed, and during the second year, 1,950 pounds.

FISH RESCUE WORK

In the early part of the year, due to spring rains and melting snow, most of the rivers of the state rise so much that low-lying areas along their banks are flooded. Fish spawn and feed in the quiet waters thus formed, and, later in the summer, are trapped in the land-locked ponds and sloughs which are formed when the rivers recede to their normal levels.

Deputy wardens are equipped with rescue seines for seining out and returning to live waters the fish thus trapped. During the year ending June 30, 1923, deputy wardens, assisted by fish and game clubs, rescued 636,700 fish and placed them in running waters, while for the following year, 2,269,000 were rescued.

Along the Mississippi River this work is carried on by crews working out from the Sabula and Lansing collecting stations. Thousands of fish are rescued annually and released to the main channel of the river, while some of small size, suitable for transportation, are collected and conveyed to the stations for distribution throughout the state. The distributions of fish, collected at these stations for this biennium, were as follows:

REPORT ON REMOVAL OF ROUGH FISH

Unless properly controlled, rough fish propagate so rapidly that they become detrimental to the propagation of game fish. For this reason the law provides that the warden may enter into contracts with commercial fishermen for the removal of carp, buffalo, and other rough fish, from any state waters. The work of each contract is done under personal supervision of a deputy game warden, and all expenses connected with each contract are borne by the fishermen with whom the contract is made. In addition to reducing the rough fish menace, this method provides considerable revenue for the state.

MUSSELS

Early in 1923, after conferences with representatives of Illinois, Wisconsin and the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, certain areas of the Mississippi River were closed to the taking of mussels for a period of five years. Illinois and Wisconsin closed the areas directly opposite those closed by Iowa, so that each area extends from shore to shore.

Areas of rivers that have been closed to clamming and which are in effect at this time are:

Des Moines River closed from the mouth to Eddyville and from Des Moines to Ft. Dodge, until January 1, 1926.

Iowa River closed from the mouth to Marengo and from Marshalltown to Iowa Falls, until January 1, 1926.

Cedar River closed from Cedar Rapids up throughout its headwaters, until January 1, 1926.

Shell Rock River entirely closed, until January 1, 1926.

Smith Creek in Muscatine County entirely closed, until January 1, 1926.

Mississippi River closed from Lansing to Harper's Ferry; from Marquette to Guttenberg; from Specht's Ferry to Dubuque; from Bellevue to Sabula; from Clinton to the mouth of the Wapsipinicon River; from Bettendorf to Buffalo; from Muscatine to Port Louisa; from New Boston, Illinois, to Keithsburg, Illinois; and from Oquawka, Illinois, to Burlington, until January 1, 1928.

Each licensee is required to make report of his operations at the end of the year, but because of the wandering nature of many of the clambers, it is impossible to get a complete report. In 1922 there were 241 licenses issued but only 192 reports were received. In 1923 the number of licenses issued totalled 380, but only 267 reports were received. The table above was made from the reports actually received.

OUT OF DOOR NOTES AND MAXIMS

Be Generous

When hunting, never make undue effort to reach the bag limit. What the law allows is invariably too large, so be generous in the use of your privilege.

Be a Good Sport

In both hunting and fishing be true to the ethics of good sport, always rely on your skill in such a way that the weaker creature has a chance.

Help the Deputy

Be the deputy warden's ready supporter when occasion requires, and thus promote what will tend to the mutual welfare of all lovers of the out-of-doors. This will create a standard of conduct that will minister to the good will of all.

Watch for the Quail

When the snow is drifting and the ground is frozen near where we live, there may be a covey of quail unable to get any food. It will save the birds and do us lots of good if we sweep away the snow and scatter grain and table scraps where they can feed on them.

The Air Gun

This instrument is of no practical value and in the hands of an inexperienced person may become a dangerous weapon. Parents should never permit the air gun in the home, and thus save the lads from the temptation to use it and avoid the accidents that so easily come.

Birds Like Water

Water is a vital necessity for our birds and many species use it for bathing as well as drinking. Every garden should have a vessel a few feet square and an inch or two deep, where the robins, goldfinches and others can come and drink or bathe as they may wish. Place this where it will be safe from cats and other enemies of birds.
